I590 Domestic servants also have been taken by the Fathers under the shield of their casuistry. Should a servant deem his wages not enough, or the food, clothing, and other necessaries provided for him not equal to that which is provided for servants of similar rank in other houses, he may recompense himself by abstracting from his masters property as much as shall make his wages commensurate with his services. So has Valerius Reginald decided. t It is fair, however, that the pupil be cautioned that this lesson cannot safely be put in practice against his teacher. The story of John dAlba, related by Pascal, shows that the Fathers do not relish these doctrines in praxi nearly so well as in thesi, when they themselves are the sufferers by them. DAlba was a servant to the Fathers in the College of Clermont, in the Rue St....
