Potter Mays retreats immediately after college graduation to the safe house of his childhood home. Like clockwork each morning, his mother makes him eggs, lovingly fried into hollowed-out pieces of toast. His father, in the midst of a campaign to revitalize downtown St. Louis, promises to poke around for gainful employment for his son. Potters best friend, Stuartan Independent Thought Contractor working out of his parents lavish pool houseis willing to serve as a kind of life coach, provided, of course, that Potter pays for his services all summer. Potter was not invited, and getting a good nights sleep has recently become an issue for him. As enigmatic packages arrive from Audrey, the refuge of life at home soon proves illusory. Potters parents are oddly never in the same room together, the neighbor girl is looking quite adult, and Stuarts much-needed counseling service is subcontracted to a third-party denizen of the pool house with an agenda all his own.
